

Make your information easy to access

The ways we communicate have constantly and rapidly developed in recent years. The world today is one teeming with information channels. Our smartphones let us access knowledge from throughout the globe in seconds. But how do we decide which channels are appropriate and which knowledge is really necessary – for instance, during our working life?

Specific groups of employees within a company need access to specific information to get their work done. Some examples include sales representatives or staff from production, logistics or mobile support services. So how do you as a company ensure that these staff get the information they need?

We all know that different roles in the company require different information. The d.velop community connect app lets you make rights-based information, data and processes available on mobile devices to help everything run smoothly in your company and beyond.

A potential starting page for your employee app: An overview of your Intranet.

Important: What do you understand by the term fair communication?

Does every employee have the opportunity to access all the information that is relevant to them? What time and effort is involved in doing so? What does fair communication look like in the digital age?

The smartphone: our most fundamental shared digital unifier

Benefits and added values

- Touchpoint and access point for all your company processes
- ✓ Eliminate media gaps (company newsletters/bulletin boards/payroll services)
- ✔ Process automation from one single provider
- Increased employee motivation
- Transparent, goal-oriented and personalized communication
- Rapid dissemination of information
- Improved access to all your existing communication channels

See communication as a dialog.

To ensure that d.velop community connect brings a real added benefit to you and your staff, the app works in two directions. What does that mean exactly? One of the most important processes in which employees send documents to their employer is the reporting of sick leave. With the d.velop app, your staff no longer have to make the extra effort to submit sickness certificates by post or in person. They can use the integrated self-service feature, and simply take a photo of the sick note to make it available to their employer. Naturally, all of this is done over a secure connection.

In the other direction, the company can easily supply staff with their monthly payslips in digital form, for instance.

Become a digitization pioneer. Steadily reduce your paper-based processes. Utilize the d.velop app.

The really good news? These sick leave reporting and payroll services features come included with the d.velop community connect app and do not need to be purchased separately.
